

MIND MAP

ANTHROPOCENTRIC ECOLOGY

In an anthropocentric approach to ecology our obligations regarding the environment are to be determined solely on the basis of human interests.

We can appeal to human interests in order to ground a duty not to pollute the environment — that is, a duty not to pollute unless there are overriding moral considerations.